

Friends of Scotchman Peaks Wilderness

For Our Families, For Tomorrow

The Friends of Scotchman Peaks Wilderness is a volunteer driven group of concerned residents from North Idaho and Western Montana with over 3,500 supporters who believe that our region would benefit from protecting the 88,000-acre Scotchman Peaks roadless area through wilderness designation.

Ecological Benefit of Wilderness Designation for the Scotchmans:

- Protect water quality, rare, endangered and sensitive flora and fauna (including grizzly bears, Canada lynx, mountain goat, wolves, bald eagles and bull trout).
- Additional habitats not well represented in the National Wilderness Preservation System (low elevation boreal forests and cedar/hemlock communities.)

The Scotchman Are Well Situated for Wilderness because:

- Less than 4% of the Kootenai Forest is presently protected as wilderness.
- No new wilderness has been designated on this forest since 1964.
- The Kootenai has less wilderness than any other national forest in Montana.
- There are 0 acres of designated wilderness in the five Idaho Panhandle counties.

Dispelling Myths - Wilderness Designation for the Scotchmans Does NOT:

- Close any existing roads
- Limit hunting, fishing, hiking, berry picking or any non-mechanized activities (in fact it enhances these activities).
- Impact any existing, or proposed, timber or mining jobs.

Economic Impact – What Wilderness DOES do:

- Local communities will benefit from the unparalleled recreational and economic opportunities which wilderness provides.
- Many studies have indicated a strong link between protected public lands and diverse, vibrant western economies.
- We are shifting from extraction-based industries to business dependant upon natural beauty and “quality of life” which wilderness can provide.
